

Different ways people use land in Montana today

People treat land differently in Montana these days. Some things we do are the same things from back then. Over half the population is doing construction and building more buildings. We are starting to do more vegetation. The farmers/ranchers are starting up new livestock. About 14 percent of the American population goes camping.